

Multigenre Research Paper (7)

Rough Draft Due Date: February 15, 2019

Final Revision Due date: February 22, 2019

Research Symposium: March 1, 2019

Goal

For this unit, you will create a multigenre research binder as if you are a jack-of-all-trades. This type of person has many skills, from writing, to drawing, to creating music. In your multigenre research binder, you will choose and research one historical event. You will write an informative essay on the topic as well as select five subgenres to help teach your audience about your event. Your multigenre research binder will contain six final writing pieces.

Role

Your role is that of a research expert who is informed, formal, and creative.

Audience

Your multigenre research binder should be geared toward an academic audience.

Situation

You have been commissioned to create a multigenre binder for a local newspaper. The newspaper itself uses multiple genres to engage its readers; therefore, they are curious to know how an up-and-coming writer like yourself captivates an audience through informative writing and multigenre creativity.

Purpose

The purpose of this project is to use a mix of academic, trade, and popular sources to create a coherent exposition about a significant historical event. You must use critical thinking skills and methods of inquiry to find appropriate research about your topic.

Standards and Criteria

Refer to the rubrics below to better understand how your work will be assessed.
